

Henry Schein Medical Helps Health Care Professionals Throughout Allergy Season

May 26, 2023

Company Offers A One-Stop Shop for Allergy Supplies and Pharmaceuticals to Help Test, Diagnose, and Treat Patients

MELVILLE, N.Y., May 26, 2023 – In the United States, about 20 million people have food allergies and 80 million people have rhinitis due to nasal allergies, according to the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America (AAFA). To ensure health care professionals have the necessary tools to help patients control and manage allergies, Henry Schein Medical offers a portfolio of equipment, supplies, and pharmaceuticals ranging from food and environmental testing to hypodermics and waste management, and more.

Recognizing that allergy season is lasting longer for individuals with asthma and allergies, medical professionals can explore a range of allergy product offerings from Henry Schein Medical such as:

- Capital Equipment: Minaris Medical's Food & Environmental Testing
- Pharmaceuticals: Rx and Over-the-Counter Medications
- Hypodermics: Needles and Syringes

In addition, allergy skin testing supplies, epinephrine and autoinjectors, and inhalers are available. The Company also provides waste management products designed to help keep patients and staff safe from sharps injuries while mitigating the spread of contagious diseases.

"Henry Schein, along with our supplier partners, are pleased to offer health care professionals a wide range of products and supplies to help keep patients healthy this allergy season," said Stephanie Shen, Vice President of Product Category Management & Supplier Relations for Henry Schein's North America Distribution Group. "At Henry Schein Medical, our goal is to help our customers continue to deliver high-quality care while operating an efficient practice. By equipping health care professionals with allergy essentials all in one place, practitioners can spend more time focusing on what they do best – taking care of patients."
